JWF Allocates $9.3 Million; $1.6 Million Locally

Allocations to beneficiary agencies of the Jewish Welfare Federation from the proceeds of the 1975 Campaign in the amount of $9,343,229 were approved last week by the board of directors. This sum covers budgetary requirements for the 1975 calendar year.

In approving the recommendations presented by Robert Levison, Jr., chairman of the Social Planning and Budgeting Committee, an intensive two month review of programs and budget needs by the committee came to an end.

The 1974 Campaign, following on the heels of the disastrous Yom Kippur War, committed $11,306,180 to the network of local, regional, national and overseas beneficiary and constituent agencies. The allocation from the 1973 Campaign was $6,457,721.

This year local programs received a total of $1,625,938, an increase of $133,518 over 1974. A total of $30,425 was allocated to regional programs, as compared with $22,675 from the 1974 Campaign. National allocations reached $214,165, up from $206,405. The total amount destined for the people of Israel and overseas programs from the 1975 Campaign will be $7,472,701, based on a projected $9.8 million-campaign.

The continuing emphasis on Jewish education led the Committee to raise the Bureau of Jewish Education's allocation from $207,500 in 1974 to $225,750. In addition, $55,000 was designated to Brandeis-Hillel Day School and $17,500 to the South Peninsula Hebrew Day School.

Reflecting the greater burden placed on the Jewish community's interpretive arm, the Jewish Community Relations Council this year received an allocation of $158,000, an increase of $15,000 over last year.

After two years as a pilot project funded through Federation's Endowment Fund, the Jewish Vocational and Career Counseling Service this year was advanced to the status of a constituent agency. The approved allocation for the last six months of 1975 to JVCCS is $41,000.

The Jewish Family Service Agency and the Jewish Home for the Aged both received increases. JFSA this year was allocated $125,000, $10,000 over 1974. The Home's 1975 allocation jumped $3,520, from $82,880 to $86,400.

An addition to Federation's

Bolshoi Patrons Get Message

By Phil Bronstein

(Jewish Bulletin Staff Writer)

The cream of San Francisco society now knows the fate of Soviet Jewish artist Boris Penson, sentenced to 10 years hard labor in the USSR. They learned about him, and other Jewish activists, at the recent opening of Moscow's Bolshoi Ballet here.

As the wealthy patrons of the Bay arrived by limousine at the Opera House, they found a well-organized group of volunteers from the local Soviet Jewry groups, politely handing out brochures asking the artists of the ballet to be aware of Soviet cultural imprisonment of their fellow artists.

The brochure was skillfully done to resemble a Bolshoi program on the outside. Most of the wealthy going in the side entrance reached out, almost as an afterthought, and removed leaflets from the carefully scrubbed hands of the volunteers. Some took them with slight disdain, others plucked them gingerly with two manicured fingers, some ignored them completely. But the message did get into their pockets and handbags in the flow of gloved-chauffeurs and minks sweeping the sidewalk. One matron, sticking as close to her bejeweled pack as possible, even retraced her steps to accept a brochure. Curiosity had cracked the bastions of the rich. Even the mayor cheerfully accepted one. One gentleman in a Mercedes limousine took the offering with a well-heeled, softly-said "Mazel

Protest Ban On Event

PARIS—(JTA)—About 5000 people demonstrated on the Champs Elysees against President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's decision to stop all French celebrations of the World War II Allied victory over Nazi Germany.

Israel Offers Egypt A Compromise On Sinai Accord

JERUSALEM — Israel proposed a new disengagement agreement with Egypt that would last three to four years and would last three to four years and would include a land corridor to an oilfield at Abu Rudeis in what is now occupied Sinai.

Israeli Government officials, in reporting this, said Israel had also offered to withdraw from the western parts of the Gidi and Mitla Passes in Sinai. But, they added, Israel wants to retain control of the eastern ends of the passes and access to electronic surveillance stations she maintains in the Gidi Pass.

The proposal, which was outlined to President Anwar el-Sadat of Egypt by the American Ambassador to Cairo, represents a modification of an Israeli position discussed by Secretary of State Kissinger last March, just before the breakdown of indirect negotiations he was conducting for a new interim agreement.

At that time, Israel was talking of evacuating only an enclave around the Abu Rudeis area itself and allowing land access through her lines along a road with United Nations checkpoints. Now, Israeli officials said, she offers a land corridor along the coast between the town of Suez and the oilfield and asks that Israeli vehicles be permitted to patrol it under United Nations supervision.

In March, Israel was pressing for an accord that would last five to seven years. Now she wants one that would last a minimum of three years, preferably four.

In exchange for the withdrawals, Israel wants an Egyptian commitment not to use force for the duration of the interim agreement.

Since Egypt has repeatedly demanding the return of the Entire Gidi and Mitla Passes, many officials here expect a negative reply initially to the new Israeli offer. But they said they hoped that the proposal would open the way to further discussions of a new interim agreement.

Officials said the details of the new Israeli offer were approved in principle by the Cabinet, put into final form by Premier Yitzhak Rabin and his top ministers and taken to Washington by Mr.

Jew In German Army

BONN—(JTA)—The chairman of the Central Council of Jews in Germany, Werner Nachmann, 50, is off on four weeks military training. Nachmann, who was recently awarded West Germany's Order of Merit by President Walter Scheel, says his decision to do voluntary military training is to demonstrate the closeness of German Jews to the new West German State. Under present laws, Jews are not obliged to do military service in the Bundeswehr.

FAMILY OF TRAGEDY

A Soviet Jew Fights For His Father's Life

By Phil Bronstein

(Jewish Bulletin Staff Writer)

August Shtern looks sullen, weary. He smiles rarely and appears more burdened than a man of 30 should. But he has good reason. His father, Dr. Mikhail Shtern, a dedicated physician for 30 years and a Soviet Jew, has been "sentenced to death" by a Soviet court. August has just learned that his older brother Viktor is being expelled from Russia and his mother, suffering from a brain tumor, will be all alone.

his home town of Vinnitsia where he had run a clinic and achieved a respected reputation. When world indignation

If the story sounds melodramatic, it is only the fragment of the larger tragedy of Dr. Shtern's struggle. August, a doctor of psychology, was recently allowed to emigrate to Israel. His application visa resulted in the arrest and conviction (despite admitted prosecution coercion of witnesses) of his father. The elder Shtern was first accused of poisoning children in rose over these charges, they were reduced to bribery (of 70 witnesses for the prosecution, 69 recanted their testimony in court and the remaining witness was a convicted thief.)

To everyone's shock, Dr. Shtern was sentenced to eight years in a labor camp and that, August has just learned, at hard labor. His father suffers from a heart ailment and other medical problems. August is sure his father will not live through his sentence. He has come to the U.S. to enlist support for his father.

"All the legal steps have not been passed," August told the Bulletin in an interview here. "His appeal to the Supreme Court of the Ukraine was rejected but he will make an appeal to the Supreme Soviet Court." He says with more hope in his voice than assuredness that he is "sure the Court will not only free him but will condemn the people who fabricated the case ... the investigator who gave false testimony and the judge who falsified the trial record after the trial was over."

"The chief medical expert made two different statements. He signed one during the trial and when my father denied the expertise of the statements, this 'expert' signed a different statement ... he is either illiterate or a criminal. Also, an article was published two months before the trial and sent to every Ukraine medical office. In it, my father was described as a criminal ... before the trial. This is illegal ... it was to prepare public opinion."

August described the tense mood after the trial ... and the shock of the sentence: "We waited a few days for the verdict. Everyone, even the most pessimistic, expected a year at most. He had already been in prison a year before the trial so we thought he would be free. No one believed the sentence."

In light of Soviet "leniency" in the case of the Panovs, Viktor Polsky, etc., August could only explain the severity of his father's sentence in relation to the fact that the Jackson Amendment to the trade agreement was passed by Congress and rejected by the Soviet Union during the course of the Shtern trial. The Soviets used this case to show America that they were angry.

"The prosecutor threatened us personally, prior to the trial, not to stir things up. The authorities became frightened because they knew they were the real criminals." August lowers his head "My father was four months in absolute isolation." He gestured toward a picture of his father

U.N. Palestinian Refugee Fund In Worst Crisis Yet

UNITED NATIONS—(JTA)—The United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) is facing the worst financial crisis in its 25-year history. U.N. Secretary General Kurt Waldheim said. He warned that the failure to provide funds for UNRWA could add a new element of instability to the already tense Middle East situation.

UNRWA's deficit is expected to reach $30 million out of a 1975 budget of $125 million. Waldheim said that unless additional contributions come in there would be an almost virtual elimination of UNRWA school education programs. UNRWA is financed by voluntary contributions from governments.

The main contributors in 1974 were the United States with $28 million and the European Common Market countries with $24 million. Contributions from the Arab countries have been marginal with oil-rich Saudi Arabia providing only $1 million.

Israel contributed last year the equivalent of $1.2 million in services, the Jewish Telegraphic Agency was told by UNRWA's office here. Syria contributed $100,000 in services, Lebanon $70,000 and Jordan $250,000. Egypt contributed $8000 in cash.

JNF Inscribes Golda In Its Golden Book

JERUSALEM—(JTA)—Former Israeli Premier Golda Meir was inscribed in the Golden Book of the Jewish National Fund. The United Jewish Appeal, Keren Hayesod, JNF, the Histadrut and heads of local authorities from throughout the country participated in the special ceremony at Beit Sokolov in Tel Aviv. The UJA presented Mrs. Meir with two albums containing 500 certificates of those participating in the project.

Australia Refuses To Open PLO Office

MELBOURNE—(JTA)—An official of the Palestine Liberation Organization, Gamal Surani, left Australia after a ten-day visit having failed to secure a commitment from the Australian government to open a PLO information office here.

Surani, the director of the PLO's Cairo office and its representative on the Arab League, had claimed that as a result of his visit there would be favorable changes in Australia's attitude to recognizing the PLO and that it would soon have an information office here with diplomatic status. He made his prediction after a meeting with the Prime Minister, Gough Whitlam, in Canberra.

However, an official in the Prime Minister's office said there was no possibility of Australia's granting the PLO diplomatic status in the foreseeable future. Whitlam had made this clear during his meeting with Surani, the spokesman added, and he had also told him there was no possibility of the PLO establishing an information office in Australia "at present."

In contrast to a visit last month by two representatives of the General Union of Palestinian Students, a PLO affiliate, Surani's visit was marked by an absence of violent clashes between Jewish demonstrators and PLO supporters. But there was violence within the local Lebanese community when supporters of the Phalangists demonstrated against Surani outside the Lebanese consulate in Sydney. Police had to break up fighting between the Phalangists and PLO supporters. Nine people were arrested and a number of rifles, pistols, knives and ammunition was confiscated.

The discovery of arms among local Arabs shocked many Australians and led to demands by the Premiers of all states for the immediate deportation of Surani. The Premiers of Queensland, New South Wales, Victoria and South Australia—four of Australia's six states—refused to give Surani any courtesies normally extended to visiting dignitaries. Leading members of all political parties signed letters of protest and petitions calling on the Australian government to deny entry to any further representatives of the PLO.

No Secret Agreements Made In Washington Rabin Says

JERUSALEM—(JTA)—The Prime Minister's Office denounced as "lies and falsehoods" reports published here that Premier Yitzhak Rabin and President Ford had reached a "secret agreement" in Washington on a new interim accord between Israel and Egypt. The report, published in Maariv, cited "diplomatic sources in Washington" as the source of that information.

The Cabinet was still meeting in a special session to hear Rabin's report on his talks in Washington. Political observers believe that the Cabinet will not be called upon to take any new decisions at this time. Rabin himself is understood to believe that further clarifications must come from Cairo before Israel can make any shift in its position of last March when it rejected Egypt's terms for an interim settlement. During his five days of conferences with American leaders, Rabin stuck to the principle of "parallel concessions" by both sides, a position endorsed by the Cabinet before he left for the U.S.

Rabin indicated in his public statements before leaving the U.S. and on his return to Israel that he was not satisfied with Egypt's responses which were conveyed to him by President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger. He and other Israeli and American officials, including Kissinger, have said that further contacts must be pursued through diplomatic channels before any decision can be made on the resumption of the American initiative toward an interim agreement.

Cuban Jews Treated Well Despite Cuba-Israel Riff

MONTREAL—(JTA)—Alan Rose, executive director of the Canadian Jewish Congress, reported that on a recent visit to Cuba he found that the Jews are treated with every consideration by the Cuban government and that there had been no change in the status of the 1700 Cuban Jews because of Cuba's severance of relations with Israel.

Rose said the Zionist Center, the Jewish Library and a public kosher restaurant were functioning normally, as was the Albert Einstein school where 45 Jewish children, ranging in age from 6 to 12, receive regular Hebrew instruction. He said the pupils receive lunch at public expense and are bused to and from the school.

Opposition To U.N. Labor Body That Voted For PLO Observers

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—Strong Congressional opposition, centering in the Senate, was forecast against continuing payment of United States contributions to the International Labor Organization because of its grant of observer status to the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Delegations representing United States trade unions, the U.S. government and American employers, walked out of the ILO annual conference in Geneva after the United Nations specialized agency voted observer status to the PLO.

In the latest Senatorial expression of opposition toward a U.N. agency extending recognition to the PLO, Sen. Richard S. Schweiker (R-Pa.) served notice he would urge Congress to withdraw U.S. financial support from the ILO for "legitimizing" Arab terrorists. The House Appropriations Subcommittee has approved funds totalling nearly $30 million for payment by the U.S. of its 25 percent share of the total PLO budget, as requested by the State Department.

"The United States has nothing in common with an arm of the U.N. which recognizes the PLO as a bona fide spokesman for the Arab people," Schweiker said at a Jewish United Fund of Chicago meeting. "This intentional isolation of Israel from the international community is a grave threat to the viability of the United Nations itself."

State Dept. Blasts 'Wanton Terrorists'

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—The State Department blamed the killing of an Israeli woman, her husband and brother by Arab terrorists in the Israeli village of Kfar Yuval, as "clearly sparked by an act of wanton terrorists."

Referring to the attack and the Israeli retaliation that followed against an Arab village in south Lebanon, the State Department statement said: "Our position on such incidents has been stated many times and it has not been changed. We deplore such incidents of violence, which in this case were clearly sparked by an act of wanton terrorism. We particularly deplore and regret very much the loss of innocent lives."

U.S. Ambassador To Egypt Briefed By Dr. K. On Talks

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—The American Ambassador to Egypt, Herman Eilts, was in Washington for "personal consultations" with Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and other top U.S. officials regarding possible moves towards resumption of negotiations in the Middle East. Eilts will be "fully briefed" on the visit of Premier Yitzhak Rabin and will then return to Cairo for talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, the State Department said. Malcolm Toon, the new U.S.

Ambassador to Israel, who had expected to be in Tel Aviv, was understood to be delaying his departure a few days, presumably to await the results of the talks with Khaddam.

State Department spokesman Robert Anderson said that the communications in the current diplomatic effort for a Mideast settlement will be made through diplomatic channels. However, it would be "very useful" for Eilts to return here at this particular time, Anderson said.

Refugee Issue

One of the tragic inequities of the Middle East political arena was revealed recently with the news that the United Nations Relief and Works Agency for Palestine Refugees in the Near East (UNRWA) is facing its worst financial crisis in its 25-year history. This fact alone is sad in the light of the millions of dollars the oil-rich "brothers" of these Arab refugees have squandered at the gambling tables of Europe.

What was more shocking and ironic was that Israel, according to UNRWA officials, donates $1.2 million in services to UNRWA yearly. Jews have always been quick to help their fellow man in keeping with their religious teachings of moral responsibility, but the twist here comes as one compares the Arab contributions to UNRWA: Saudi Arabia, one of the world's richest countries - $1 million; Syria, the PLO's staunchest ally - $100,000 in services; Lebanon, where guerrillas hide their bases - $70,000; and Jordan - $250,000. Egypt, the most vociferous and active Arab state in the war with Israel - a whopping $8,000 in cash.

Much has been said about the use of refugees by the Arabs and even their mistreatment at the hands of Israel but no one fact is as telling as this lopsided donation list. True, it is rumored that Arab countries dump substantial sums into the inflated ego of Yassir Arafat but when it comes to the plight of the Palestinians themselves, Israel provides more voluntary aid than any single Arab country — and all that with an Israeli economy that barely dares to take too many financial deep breaths. Apparently the "Arab unity and brotherhood" Arab leaders seek does not include those who are not able to afford to actively take up a cudgel against Israel.

This list attests not only to the humanity of the State of Israel, but puts in clear perspective the cruelty and callousness of the Arab leaders towards their blood brothers whose plight they bemoan and use as a bludgeon over Israel's head.

Ky's Kibbutzim

It didn't take ex-South Vietnam Premier Nguyen Cao Ky very long after his arrival in this country to come up with an imaginative proposal that would help take care of the Vietnamese refugee flow to the U.S.

The one-time South Vietnamese air force commander said he would try to organize a kibbutz in Arkansas or Texas where rehabilitation efforts could be carried out.

There is something ironic about General Ky suddenly accepting the kibbutz idea as a technique to help solve the problem of resettling and rehabilitating his countrymen. Prior to the Yom Kippur War of 1973 Israel was represented in Asia and many Third World countries by missions dedicated to helping those countries overcome social and economic problems. The people of South Vietnam might well have adopted the kibbutz plan at a time when they were still on their own soil. That process might have served to strengthen them just as it proved to be a solid building technique in the development of Israel.

It's regrettable that Gen. Ky did not propose the kibbutz plan until he saw its possibilities on the plains of Texas.

Q. A lady unable to move without a wheel chair wishes to attend synagogue on the Sabbath. May she be pushed there by another worshipper and also may she sit in the body of the congregation since she clearly cannot reach the gallery?

A. You are asking, obviously, from the Orthodox point of view. I am afraid that the majority of Orthodox rabbis today would not permit her to be wheeled to the synagogue by another worshipper on the grounds that this would involve that worshipper in the offense of "carrying" in the public domain. But she can be taken to synagogue by a non-Jewish friend. As for sitting in the body of the congregation, surely most humane rabbis would permit this in her case.

EARL RAAB

Candid Comments

Is Anyone Steering?

Who runs the San Francisco Jewish community?

That is a common kind of question these days. There is a great deal of research about "community power structures." One political scientist did such a study of the city of New Haven some years back; one was done recently on the Cincinnati Jewish community; and there have been hundreds in between.

More people seem interested in knowing where the power is, and who runs what. The term "establishment" is popular in that regard, although it usually turns out to be of more use to politicians than to analysts. One popular image of an "establishment" is that of a definable group which has comprehensive control over all of the major affairs of the community — and which exercises that control behind closed doors.

It is interesting that such a definition of "establishment" coincides with a definition of "conspiracy," as used, for example in the Protocols of the Elders of Zion. And it is interesting that these various studies have not really found such a comprehensive establishment anywhere.

This does not mean that there are not powerful forces. There are, and they often try to operate behind closed doors for their own ends. It just means that there is rarely any single force, any single person or group which can exercise overall control in a community.

As a matter of fact, it may turn out that we're in a situation where there is not enough of an establishment for certain purposes. Haven't you had the feeling at some points in recent years that nobody is running the city — or the country? Various forces, powerful and less powerful, are pushing in various directions, for limited objectives, but no one is trying to exercise some planning or control over the total result.

"Control" is another word that needs some examination at this point. A person is trying to exercise control who engages in a secret conspiracy with a few people to manipulate a situation. That is dangerous control. But, a person is also trying to exercise control who takes the bold initiative, with others, in trying to develop ideas and forces that will move the community, through due process, in a desired direction. "Leadership" is a good word for that kind of control.

When Justice Haim Cohn, of the Israeli Supreme Court, was in San Francisco recently, and was asked what he considered the chief internal problem in Israel, he replied: "The same as the chief problem in the world: leadership."

Surely, the relative absence of strong leadership is not just an accident of birth. Perhaps the concept of leadership has been partly chipped away by public-opinionitis — the idea that the political feelings of the majority, or of a substantial minority, should have instant gratification. That is contrary to the Madisonian concept on which this country's politics were founded: representative government, operating on laws and institutions which cannot respond overnight to public demand. Finally, these laws and institutions can, of course, be changed by public demand, but hesitations are built in, so that planning and deliberation can be factors.

In such a system, there is room for leadership. In an instant-gratification system, there is room only for demagoguery, and for "leaders" who merely follow the perceived public pressure of the moment.

A voluntary community, like the Jewish community, has a somewhat analogous system. No one has yet made a serious study of the Jewish community structure here, as was done in Cincinnati. But the results would probably be the same as all the others — and, if they are, they would suggest the following: there have been a number of forces operating willy-nilly; but there has been too little overall planning or leadership control. In that sense, there has not been enough of an establishment.

For the next several weeks, Earl Raab will be attending a conference at Bar-Ilan University in Israel, as one of 15 Jewish "scholars and writers" from around the world who have been invited to meet with 15 Israelis to discuss in some depth "The Jewish Political Tradition and Its Contemporary Uses." The results will be published as a book, in Hebrew and English.

Letters To The Editor

Israeli Courage

Editor, Jewish Bulletin:

Israel has refused to give up its strategic position in the Sinai unless it receives an iron-clad peace. This is being condemned in our own press, and in the press of other countries, as a foolhardy failure to face up to the realities which confront that tiny nation. These realities include:

1. An endless source of arms to the Arab nations from Soviet Russia.

2. The armed forces of Israel are overwhelmingly outnumbered by the huge armies of the much larger Arab nations which completely surround Israel.

3. The immense wealth of the Arab nations, which they have drained off from the industrial countries by the sky-rocketing price of oil—wealth so enormous that they can fight a war on a cash basis.

4. And finally, the enormous pressure to "be flexible" from the one nation which still befriends and supports Israel: in other words, to accept a Munich.

However, as the heat of the event cools off, this refusal by Israel will become increasingly recognized by the nations of the world as an act of extraordinary courage. This is the same kind of courage that enabled a handful of colonists, scattered over the forests of our Atlantic seaboard, to fight a war for seven years against the greatest land and sea power of their time—Great Britain—to win the right to establish their own nation.

As time goes on, this action by Israel will win, and will deserve the world's acclaim for extraordinary courage.

Praise From N.Y.

Editor, Jewish Bulletin:

As a long-time former resident of the San Mateo area who for years received the old Jewish Community paper, I want to express my sincere congratulations for the manner in which the Jewish Bulletin has progressed as a really wonderful newspaper. I have been a paid subscriber now for several years, since residing in Westchester County, N.Y. I look forward every week to getting the Bulletin. It is my main link with the Jewish world. I am especially impressed with the Bulletin's columnists, editorials and feature stories. I am enclosing a check for a gift subscription to be sent to my daughter who is a graduate student at Berkeley. Keep up the good work.

Self-Defeating

Editor, Jewish Bulletin:

I should like to thank Ms. Helene Neuron for her letter "Dis-mayed at Gold (Bulletin, June 6). It was an answer to Bertram Gold who is ready to "sell-out" the State of Israel.

It is people like him who provoke "letters to the editor" of the San Francisco Examiner (June 11) which state how right Gen. Brown was with his remarks about a "Jewish lobby," how Israel's demands drain our treasury and "cast us in the role of merchants of death" and that Israel is pushing America into a third World War!!!

If Gold can't speak out for Israel, then he should not speak in the name of the Jewish community against Israel.

A self-defeating Jew is a sad Jew.

THE 'Y' BOYS WHO MADE IT BIG

'Mixed Up Boy' Was Guy Named Cantor

As part of the bicentenary of the American Revolution a conference will be held on Jewish Cultural Arts. The venue will be the Young Men's (and Women's) Hebrew Association center on New York's 92nd St. A Special Correspondent writes about a survey being conducted by the famous Hollywood producer, Dore Schary, who is hoping to make a list of former "Y" boys whose names today are bywords the world over.

NEW YORK—The Marx Brothers, Billy Rose, Irving Berlin, George Jessel, Eddie Cantor and Sam Levinson went there to find an oasis from the deserts of the city streets, and Bernard Baruch used to "work out" in its gymnasium. Jacob (later Sir Jacob) Epstein and Chaim Gross and the Soyer brothers, Raphael and Moses, leading American artists, found opportunities there for self-development. Arthur Murray learned to dance, and David Sarnoff, long before he became a brigadier-general and founder of the Radio Corporation of America, learned his English there.

If the list is far from complete, Dore Schary, the eminent stage and motion picture producer, would like to complete it, and is asking the Jewish community to help him do so.

He means the 92nd Street YM-YWHA and the Educational Alliance, and he wants the list in time for the national Conference on Jewish Cultural Arts to be conducted by the National Jewish Welfare Board in January 1976 as part of the Jewish contribution to the American Revolution Bicentennial. Schary is chairman of the national planning committee for the conference.

Eddie Cantor

Schary himself is a former "Y" boy. His first play was produced by a theatre group at the YM-YWHA of Metropolitan New Jersey, then the Newark YMHA, and he became the director of the Y's Little Theatre and organized and directed drama groups at other Y's in New Jersey. When he went to Hollywood he became active in the Jewish community center of Los Angeles.

The Cultural Arts Conference will be held at the 92nd "Y," next January. It was this "Y" that spawned many famous Jewish personalities in its century of activities, this and the other famous community center which has left a mark on New York Jewish history, the Educational Alliance on the Lower East Side.

The Alliance's archives tell of an elderly woman once made on one of its social workers. She was worried about her orphaned grandson. "Do something," she pleaded. "The boy is mixed up with bad company. Another thing, ehe vill eemer zingen und tanzen (he always wants to sing and dance)."

The Alliance took him in and sent him to its summer camp, but couldn't keep Eddie Cantor from singing and dancing and amusing his fellow campers. He was to laugh about this later. "That's the first time my act was ever held over," he said. "The happiest days of my life were spent at the camp." It was there that he first learned to entertain an audience.

The Y's and centers in New York were not the only testing and development grounds of talented young Jews. The Philadelphia Y's had among its members Joseph Kamm, whose play "The Shrike," won a Pulitzer Prize; Clifford Odets, the playwright and others.

In St. Louis, Abram Sacher, who was to become an outstanding historian and first president of Brandeis University, participated in the "Y" there as editor of its newspaper. He recalls that "all of us youngsters at the Center were taught quietly and undramatically the essentials of teamwork and we were awakened to the responsibilities of community service."

THERE'S NO DOCTOR

280 Jewish Families Remain In Belfast

(Second In A Series)

BELFAST — A question bothering any Jewish visitor to Belfast is the future of its Jewish community. This issue certainly bothers communal leaders as they watch gradual decline from 380 families a few years back to 280 today. It is largely a middle class community with no workers nor millionaires, mostly men in business with emphasis on credit financing in various forms. There are few professionals — the last Jewish doctor left for more tranquil and remunerative scenes some time back.

It is small compensation to them that other small Jewish communities elsewhere in the British Isles show a similar decline. Only a minority of those who left Belfast moved to Israel. The community's former spiritual leader, Rabbi Dr. Alexander Carlebach — now a Jerusalem resident — on a recent visit harangued the community for not sending more of its numbers to live in Israel. While he urged them to have more foresight, his audience remained apparently unimpressed with his arguments.

The senior warden, Harold Ross, who runs the synagogue in the absence of a rabbi, in his response agreed they could ill-afford complacency. However, he blamed Israeli bureaucracy and red tape for making it so difficult for English-speaking immigrants to settle in Israel.

Their sense of being left out in the cold is softened by the regular interest of Moshe Davis, executive director of the Office of the Great Rabbi. They remain grateful for a visit of the president of the Board of Deputies of British Jews, Lord Fisher. Their beautiful synagogue lacks a permanent rabbi and their fine Wolfson Center does not have a regular teacher of Hebrew and Judaic studies. While they charge neglect by the outside world, there might be some basis for counter-charges made in London that they can afford to hire a teacher themselves.

One communal leader admitted to me that they had Israeli teachers in the past, "but they proved too costly." So the question that begs is whether Hebrew education of even forty Jewish children should be treated as a bookkeeping matter—whether by officials in London or Jerusalem, or communal leaders in Belfast.

When asked about the future the reply of the chairman of the Congregation Council, John Kay was "given stable government in Northern Ireland, there is a fine future ahead."

There were Jews in Belfast in 1771 but the life of the organized community began in 1864. The present synagogue was inaugurated in 1964 and the Wolfson Center contains the city's coat-of-arms presented by the Lord Mayor of Congregations centenary. In the early 1900s, Belfast had a Jewish Lord Mayor, Sir Otto Jaffe, who inaugurated the second synagogue in 1904.

The relatively high level of Joint Israel Appeal and Zionist activities indicate their warm identification with Israel. I heard constantly during my stay complaints of neglect by institutions and it may be asked why they do not have regular visits from one of the thirty Jewish Agency emissaries assigned to Britain. Belfast Jews were disappointed by the cancellation of

Treason Of Intellectuals

After World War I, Julian Benda, a French Jewish intellectual, wrote a book (which I believe has recently been reissued in paperback) entitled "The Treason of The Intellectuals." Julian Benda accused the socialists — religionists — writers and intellectuals — that when war broke out abandoned their stance for brotherhood and universalism and flocked almost hysterically to their national colors.

Partisan Review editorially accused the Russian literati of being silent or even supportive in the Soviet oppression of its people. It notes with considerable interest that whatever protest that is heard comes from the scientists — but not from the exponents to the humanities. Dissent in America mostly emanates from the literary intellectuals — and not from the scientific community. How to explain it?

Rabbi White

"In our own society, in America and Europe, we tend to assume that intellectuals associated with the arts and the humanities take the lead in criticizing the government and the system, while those connected with the sciences are more neutral, less political, more involved with their own disciplines. Most literary people, for example, do not feel at home with the government; on the other hand, few of the soft or the hard scientists feel compromised when they are consulted or employed by the government.

The reason for this split obviously has had much to do with the fact that the literary intellectuals have been more concerned with values and ideas, and with their relation to the rest of society. It is, in fact, the peculiar combination of thinking about existence as a whole while feeling outside the mainstream that has distinguished the modern sensibility. Now it is startling to discover that the situation is just the opposite in the Soviet Union ...

"The scientific intelligentsia, on the other hand, unlike scientists here, seem to represent, if only indirectly, the ideals of a free society. For one thing, they are not ideologically incriminated in the communist regime. But, in addition, the growth of science and industry in the Soviet Union constitutes a challenge to the regime, while in this country the relation to the system is much more complex and contradictory."

Strange Case Of Abba Eban

HAIFA—Abba Eban's many friends and admirers overseas have been puzzled by his recent outbursts of criticism against his own colleagues and fellow party members. It seems strange that one who for eight years was Foreign Minister, and a leader in the formulation of Israel's foreign policy, should suddenly find that his own party is all wrong in its policies. To understand the complex political situation one must look into the background.

It has long been known that the enormous esteem in which Eban is held by Jews overseas is not fully shared by the citizens of Israel. Indeed, Eban himself has suggested that if the Jews of the Diaspora could vote in Israel's elections his political future would be assured.

Eban first entered public life as a scholar and civil servant. He emerged on the world Jewish scene as a Jewish Agency representative at the U.N. Soon after the creation of the state he was projected into his brilliant role as statesman and diplomat. He was an apolitical figure. Until he resigned as ambassador to the U.S. and returned to Israel in 1960 it was not even known to which of the Israel political parties he would adhere. I believe there was much political wooing. Many who admired him were disillusioned with what seemed to be his opportunism when he joined the big and dominant Mapai, now the Israel Labor Party. But he was never one of the back room boys, and even in the party was looked upon as an outsider.

Alpert

After a frustrating period as Minister of Education and a brief spell as Deputy Prime Minister, he served for eight years as Foreign Minister. And then suddenly he found himself in the political backwaters, passed over when the time came to call for new leadership.

Eban's open criticism of Rabin and his own party must in the first instance be seen in the context of Israel democracy. This country has a healthy and vociferous opposition. There is freedom of criticism from both the right and left, despite the extremes to which such criticism sometimes goes. Opposition from within a party is usually confined to the inner party circles, however. When Lyova Eliav found himself at odds with the policies of the Labor Party he took the honorable course of resigning from the party and of seeking to win new supporters here.

As I See Israel

Eban, on the other hand, in turning against his erstwhile colleagues has apparently directed his appeal to his overseas "constituents." Even in Israel it is not accepted procedure to campaign for high political post here by appealing to Jews abroad and citing their support to assure him a "leading voice" in the formulation of policy.

Some here have observed that at a time when heads were rolling in the aftermath of the Yom Kippur War and reputations were being blackened, the Israel public was tolerant of the man who for eight years was architect of the country's foreign policy — a policy which ended in absolute disaster in Africa, in steady erosion in Latin America and in loss of support from some of our best friends in Europe. It certainly comes in ill grace for Abba Eban, at a time like this, to point a finger at Yitzhak Rabin.

Eban is a man of many talents, and if he has his weaknesses, who does not? We hope he will learn to play the game of politics more skillfully, and will remember that government is a team. There are many services which he can still render to his people.

She'll Go 'Down Under' With Yeshiva U. Team

Lisa Ann Weiner, who will be a junior at Yeshiva University's Stern College for Women this fall, has been selected as an instructor on a 15-member team of faculty and students from Yeshiva to spend the summer in Australia and New Zealand.

Lisa, 20, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest H. Weiner of Berkeley. Weiner serves as Bay Area director of the American Jewish Committee. She completed her sophomore year at UC Berkeley and will major in Near Eastern Studies and social work at Yeshiva University.

More than 2000 Australian teenagers will participate in the "Counterpoint-5735" program, according to Rabbi Martin Katz, head advisor of Yeshiva's seminar programs.

The Yeshiva U. "team" was invited by the Australian Jewish Board of Deputies to offer teenagers and college youth a "total Jewish experience," through seminars providing basic instruction in Judaism, contemporary issues relating to Judaism, leadership training, music, arts and crafts. They will be in Australia June 26 to Aug. 16 and then work with Jewish youth in New Zealand for several weeks.

Ms. Weiner is the only instructor from the West Coast and the only undergraduate on the "team." She told the Jewish Bulletin: "Jewish behavior is the outcome of many influences which are the product of growth: intellectual, spiritual, emotional, social, physical and ethical. Currently, some dimensions are ignored, and it is projects such as these seminars which may correct the imbalance in growth for young Jews."

Ms. Weiner will teach several courses in Judaic heritage and values and lead sessions in drama and leadership training.

There are an estimated 90,000 Jews in Australia and New Zealand. To further efforts at strengthening its youth's ties to Judaism, the Yeshiva team was invited to conduct seminars in Melbourne, Sydney, the University of New South Wales, Caulfield, Perth and Canberra. The Jewish communities of Hong Kong, the Philippines and Japan have been invited to participate in the program.

Staff members from Yeshiva U. include: Rabbi Ezra Bick, Rabbi and Mrs. Heshie Billet, Rabbi and Mrs. Danny Rhein and Rabbi Katz. Student instructors include: Shmuel Goldin, Meir Mitelman, Shirley Stark, Joel Wolowelsky, Etta Zablocki, Avshalom Katz, Moshe Kempinski, Rabbi Bruce Rachlin and Lisa Weiner.

Hadassah Will Hold National Convention Here

NEW YORK—Hadassah, one of the largest women's volunteer organizations in the country, will hold its annual national convention in San Francisco from Sunday, Aug. 17 through Wednesday, Aug. 20.

About 2500 delegates, representing over 335,000 members from 1500 chapters and groups throughout the United States and Puerto Rico, will attend the 61st annual national convention of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America at the San Francisco Hilton Hotel.

Founded by Henrietta Szold in 1912, Hadassah is the largest Zionist organization in the world today and spends millions annually for its health, educational, vocational, social welfare and land-redemption program in Israel.

Rose E. Matzkin of Waterbury, Conn., national president of Hadassah, announced that in addition to hearing reports, projecting plans, and participating in seminars and workshops, the delegates will honor distinguished guests and hear addresses by government leaders and international authorities in the fields of Hadassah's activities — health, education, youth, and American and foreign affairs.

Rosalie Schechter of Harrison, N.Y. is national convention chairman, and Sylvia Doppelt of Hollis, N.Y. is co-chairman. Ruby Goodman and Fae Asher are the San Francisco chairman and co-chairman, and Beulah Schiller is President of the San Francisco Chapter.

Hadassah maintains a network of medical institutions in Israel providing healing, teaching and research radiating from its Hadassah-Hebrew University Medical Center in Ein Karem, Jerusalem. In October it will reopen its Hospital on Mount Scopus — in Eastern Jerusalem — as a division of the Medical Center.

Many U.S. agencies, such as the National Institutes of Health and the Departments of Health, Education and Welfare, and of Agriculture have shown great interest in Hadassah's medical, youth rehabilitation work, vocational training, and programs for the educationally deprived as they are carried out through Youth Aliyah and by Hadassah Israel Education Services.

In the U.S., Hadassah, a non-governmental organization accredited to the United Nations, conducts an American Affairs program through which its members contribute thousands of volunteer-hours to national school-lunch and tutorial programs, services to the aged and informs members on vital community, state, national, and international developments. Hadassah fosters creative Jewish living through Jewish education; and sponsors a Zionist co-educational youth movement (Hashachar) which provides a variety of programs for youth from nine to 25 years of age, including its Young Judaea camps located throughout the country and several year and summer-in-Israel courses for high school and college students.

Status Of Women In Israel Topic Of Final YAD Lecture

A discrepancy between ideology as espoused by Israeli leaders and reality as it concerns the status of women in Israel today was highlighted in the final lecture delivered by Nanette Stahl in the series on The Jewish Woman. Sponsored by the Young Adults Division of the Jewish Welfare Federation, the last lecture dealt entirely with the Jewish woman in Israel.

"It is interesting to examine the status of women in Israel because for the first time since the destruction of the Jewish state in antiquity, Jews have sovereignty over themselves and can enact laws to govern themselves as they wish," the lecturer thus prefaced her talk.

The discrepancy between philosophy and reality, however, "is actually built into the laws themselves which, on the one hand, espouse complete equality between the sexes, and on the other, give jurisdiction on matters of personal status, marriage and divorce to the religious authorities, where equality between the sexes does not exist."

It was pointed out that the early settlers to Israel were intent on establishing a socialist system based primarily on agrarian labor and on equality. Class distinctions as well as differences in role and status between the sexes were to be eliminated.

"In fact, women did assume a role equal to that of men in land reclamation, road building, and settlement building. The more radical element even began questioning the whole family and sexual structure ... They experimented with communal living and free sex," Ms. Stahl explained.

The kibbutz, according to the speaker, was a result of this communal-egalitarian ideology. In early kibbutz life, the family unit was broken down and children were raised in separate quarters in order to allow the full participation of women in the work of the kibbutz. They shared both roles and status with the men of the kibbutz.

Ms. Stahl noted that these ideals influenced the first laws regarding women in the newly established State of Israel. In fact, "problems begin concerning the equality of women under the law in matters of family law, personal status, and religious jurisdiction. There exists in Israel a dual legal system: the secular and the religious."

The number of political parties in Israel preclude one party from achieving a clear majority. The practical answer to this problem is a working coalition with religious parties, which use as their precondition for coalition, absolute jurisdiction over certain areas of life.

Attitudes in Israel also reveal a clash between ideology and reality. Studies have pointed out that men regard women as less intelligent, that women's place is in the home, and that men should be master at home. The men interviewed also stated that certain professions and jobs were exclusively for men. Interestingly, most women interviewed felt that their function was "pretty much in accordance with the conventional image of the family."

These attitudes are borne out in statistics: in Israel in 1971 women constituted 32.4 percent of the labor force, a lower percentage than in other industrialized countries.

$162 Million Cash For Israel

JERUSALEM—(JTA)—The Keren Hayesod-United Israel Appeal has raised $162 million in cash for Israel during the current fiscal year, its world chairman, Ezra Shapiro, reported at the opening session of the Jewish Agency's fourth annual Assembly here. The KH-UIA raises funds all over the world except in the United States.

Shapiro noted that this year's sum exceeded the amount raised after the 1967 Six-Day War and is more than half the record sums raised following the Yom Kippur War in 1973. According to Shapiro, all signs indicate even better results by the end of the fiscal year despite economic recession in many countries resulting from the Arab oil embargo.

Israel Must Double Population - Sapir

JERUSALEM—(JTA)—Pinhas Sapir, chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive, said that Israel would have to have a Jewish population of at least six million, before it could have peace and security. The present population is three million, and at the present rate of natural increase it will take 25 years to double it, which means that every effort must be made to increase aliya, Sapir said in the course of his keynote address opening the fourth annual Assembly of the Jewish Agency here.

The opening session was attended by President Ephraim Katzir of Israel, Jerusalem's Mayor Teddy Kollek, Max Fisher of Detroit, chairman of the Jewish Agency Board of Governors and Ezra Shapiro, world chairman of Keren Hayesod.

The Assembly has drawn more than 300 Jewish leaders from all over the world who, for the next four days, will be grappling with such problems as the decline in aliya, immigrant absorption, Jewish education in the diaspora, the Arab boycott and the social and economic gap in Israel's society. Most important, the Assembly will have to approve the Jewish Agency's $500 million budget for the next fiscal year which is based on an estimate of 45,000 new immigrants arriving in the country.

On '60 Minutes'

NEW YORK—(JTA)—The National News Council announced that a public hearing will be held July 9 on a complaint by the American Jewish Congress charging CBS News with inaccuracy and distortion in a segment of the "60 Minutes" program dealing with Syria's relationship to Israel. The AJCongress charged that "Israel's Toughest Enemy," a program originally aired on Feb. 16, 1975 and re-broadcast on June 8, 1975, misrepresented the status of Syrian Jews and the destruction of the city of Kuneitra.

SEEKING A BETTER UNDERSTANDING

Rabbi, Priest Exchange Pulpits To Launch An 'Honest Dialogue'

By David Friedman
(Jewish Bulletin-JTA Writer)

NEW YORK—(JTA)—At a unique convocation here a rabbi spoke for the first time from the pulpit of St. Patrick's Cathedral while a Catholic priest spoke at Temple Emanu-El. The addresses by Rabbi Ronald B. Sobel, spiritual leader of the Reform temple, and Msgr. James F. Rigney, rector of St. Patrick's, marked the beginning of what they termed a year-long "honest dialogue" between the two houses of worship.

The convocation was also the scene for making public guidelines for Catholic-Jewish relations in New York City sponsored by the temple, the cathedral, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the Archdiocese of New York. Both Rabbi Sobel and Msgr. Rigney stressed that Temple Emanu-El and St. Patrick's were not trying to impose their will on other houses of worship in New York City but hoped that their example would lead other synagogues and churches to adopt similar programs. They stressed they would not be conducting common services nor shedding their independence but would work together to solve problems faced by Jews and Catholics and to achieve a better understanding between the two groups.

The convocation marked the 10th anniversary of the Statement on Jews issued at Vatican Council II. But Msgr. Rigney said work on the guidelines had started before the recent announcement of the Vatican guidelines on the Jews.

In his address given at the cathedral, Rabbi Sobel stressed that both Jews and Christians must work together to solve problems in New York City and the world. He urged Jews to support religious freedom for the Catholic church where it is denied, such as in Czechoslovakia, and for Christians to speak up on the plight of Soviet Jewry. He added: "To truly understand us, you will have to understand the relationship between the Jewish people and the State of Israel ... That land is part of our soul and we call upon you, Christian brothers, to lend us your voice as we proclaim the right of the State of Israel to exist with freedom and peace alongside of her Arab neighbors. Justice and equality for Israeli and Arab; no more and no less—that is what we seek."

Msgr. Rigney in his address given in the evening, stressed that "today's happenings really form a prologue, a statement of intent. The validity of the prologue depends on what follows." He said that Jews and Catholics "need to spend time together ... Meeting in spasms, always on the occasion of a particular crisis, has been too much the situation up to now. With regular conversation and inevitable growth in candor we will come to a fuller and more realistic view of our goals."

Terence Cardinal Cooke, Archbishop of the Archdiocese of New York, said that establishing "a real dialogue" everywhere, where Jews and Catholics live side by side will result in the betterment of the community. "It will strengthen religious and moral values in our society so that people may live together with respect for one another in freedom and peace," he said.

The guidelines, entitled "How Jews and Roman Catholics Would Like to Live in New York," including the following as "common aspirations;" healing the wounds of misunderstanding by working together on issues affecting both groups; promoting greater cooperation through shared study and sensitivity to individual feelings and spirituality; instituting productive dialogue and closer association in Catholic and Jewish houses of worship; and facing controversial subjects candidly and with respect for each other's views, even when a consensus cannot be achieved. A committee of Catholics and Jews from the St. Patrick's and Temple Emanu-El congregation will be appointed to meet once each month to implement the guidelines.

A REVIEW

'Chassidic Saccharin'

"Judaism is a song which is to be sung unto the Lord," Rabbi Chaim Citron told the assembled audience at "A Chassidic Experience" this past Tuesday night. And so was the performance of Chassidic dances, songs and music with a solo performance by Jan Pearce.

If this was to be "a Chassidic experience," then why was it so formalized?

The audience was treated to Chassidic dancing, but this was choreographed.

Dovid Ginsburg conducted a group of fine musicians in several Chassidic melodies which he had arranged himself, but why did he wear formal tails with tzitzit fringes on the outside?

And if this performance, billed as "a Chassidic experience," was to be that, why did Jan Pearce sing arias, oratorios, selections from "Fiddler on the Roof" and other favorites, besides two or three songs in Yiddish?

These few things seemed to strike the audience as strange, even though they were probably expecting such a performance. Come on, Jan, many of them probably came just to see you anyway and would be happy with whatever you sang.

While Ginsburg conducted the brass and harpist ensemble through numbers like "Tzomoh Lecho Nafshi" (My Soul Thirsts for You), "B'nai Hechalla" (Children of the Palace), "The Mittler Rebbe's Cappella" (The Rabbi's Choir) and "Mistroshela Nigun" (Song by a Chassid), the mood was quiet and then explosive as the audience clapped along. Perhaps with singing a d a few solo instruments, the whole "experience" might have been different.

Not to say the performances were bad, however, Chabad Lubavitch Chassidism means nothing more to me now than before since there was something too saccharin about the whole thing.

Percy Warns Arabs Against U.N. Ouster

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—Senator Charles H. Percy (R-Ill.) has warned the Arab nations that if they attempt to suspend Israel from the United Nations General Assembly they would "fracture the chances for peace in the Middle East."

Percy, addressing a dinner sponsored by the United Nations Association, stated that "the one great danger that hangs like a black cloud over the United Nations is an anticipation that the Third World nations, having suspended South Africa last year from participation in the 29th General Assembly, will move in the 30th to suspend Israel." He predicted, however, that if the Arab nations oppose the attempt the Third World nations will not move to suspend Israel.

Percy asserted that the "sheer hostility" involved in the suspension of Israel "would make it virtually impossible for the Israeli government to make those adjustments of policy which peace requires."

Israelis Must Be Told 'Facts Of Life' -- Long

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—Sen. Russell B. Long (D-La.), urging grass roots support for President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in their Middle East diplomacy, says Israel's politicians "ought to tell the facts of life" to the people of Israel and cooperate with Kissinger. "Otherwise, somebody could just stumble into a world war that should have been avoided," Long warned.

Long's remarks came in response to a question in an interview on why he did not join 76 Senators in a letter to President Ford urging continued assistance to Israel.

Long is chairman of the Senate Finance Committee which handled the Trade Act of 1974 embodying the Jackson-Vanik measure tying U.S. trade benefits to Soviet emigration policy.

Long said that Kissinger's step-by-step "solution" of the Middle East problem "has not had much cooperation from the powers that be in Israel. Now somebody has got to tell those people the facts of life, that they ought to work this thing out. And our Secretary of State will have as much sympathy toward Israel as anybody in this country, you would think, having the background of being Jewish, by ancestry and having known what it is to see people persecuted."

Spain Refuses Bases For Mideast

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—The Spanish government has informed the United States that it would not permit the use of Spanish territory for the transit of military supplies to Israel in the event of a new war in the Middle East.

According to American sources, the Spanish position is one of the conditions for the renewal of American air and naval bases in Spain. Previously, the Portuguese government ruled out the use of Portuguese territory for that purpose. During the Yom Kippur War in 1973 the Azores served as a refueling stop for American transports flying military supplies to Israel.

Melvin M. Swig of San Francisco (center), regional chairman of the United Jewish Appeal's National Campaign Cabinet, talks with officials of the UJA at the Western Regional Meeting in Los Angeles.

SECOND BEST IN HISTORY

$550 Million Seen In 1975 UJA Drive

An in-depth review of the 1975 campaign and the initiation of plans to gain maximum involvement and support in the 1976 effort were the major achievements of the United Jewish Appeal's National Campaign Cabinet Western Region meeting held last week in Los Angeles.

Representatives of Western Region communities, which comprise 82 campaigns, were told by Bert Rabinowitz of Boston, Chairman of the National Campaign Cabinet, that the 1975 National UJA drive is expected to raise a total of $550 million, the second largest sum raised in the history of UJA. Although there is a feeling of satisfaction as a result of the accomplishment this year, campaign leaders are cognizant that there is no reason for feelings of smugness, since numerous humanitarian needs in Israel and among the Jewish people throughout the world remain to be met, he added.

Melvin Swig of San Francisco, Regional Chairman of the National Campaign Cabinet who presided over the meeting, reported that campaigns in the Western Region raised in excess of $83 million last year, representing more than 15 percent of the national total, which is the largest percentage raised in any area of the United States.

In reviewing the 1975 campaign, Alvin Gilens, Associate National Campaign Director and Director of the Western Region, pointed out that Cabinet members assumed key leadership roles in their own communities, with many taking on responsibilities for helping other communities. This enabled the creation of bridges between the National Campaign Cabinet and a number of communities which gained substantial benefits from the association.

Cabinet members agreed that the UJA Missions to Israel program should be a top priority in the 1976 campaign with each community making a full effort to promote participation.

Jan. 8-11, 1976, was selected as the dates for the Western Region Leadership Conference to be held in Palm Springs.

Israel Refuses Golan's Offer To Rewrite Controversial Book

JERUSALEM—(JTA)—The chief military censor has refused an offer by journalist Matti Golan to re-write his unpublished book, "Confrontation and Disengagement" to conform with censorship requirements. The decision is believed to have been made directly by Premier Yitzhak Rabin who originally ordered the book banned on grounds that it contained secret material of a delicate nature that could injure relations between Israel and the United States.

The incident created a furor in Israel when the New York Times published news that the Golan book had been banned after Rabin had extracted a promise from Israeli newspaper editors not to publish that fact.

Golan's book purports to contain verbatim transcripts of conversations between Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and former Premier Golda Meir during the period November, 1973-January, 1974, when cease-fire and disengagement agreements were being negotiated between Israel, Egypt and Syria after the Yom Kippur War. According to reports, the book records unflattering remarks made by Kissinger about the heads of several governments.

Dream Workshops Begin July 7

Carl Levinson's "Dream Workshop" will be included in this summer's events at the S.F. Jewish Community Center, 3200 California St. Participants in the workshop will share writings, paintings, musical compositions and other creative works in order to shed light on the Jungian meanings of the unconscious in their work.

Classes of four sessions each are scheduled to begin on Monday, July 7 at 7 p.m.; Tuesday, July 8 at 1:30 p.m. and Wednesday, July 9 at 7 p.m.

Levinson holds a master's degree in social work and has taught the dream workshop many times at the Center. Fees for the course are $15 for members and $20 for non-members. Parking will be available in the evenings at the Fireman's Fund parking lot directly across the street from the Center. For more information, call 346-6040.

Cantors Convene Here

The American Conference of Cantors, the national organization of Reform cantors, will convene at the Sir Frances Drake Hotel on Monday, July 7 for the group's annual convention. The convention will run until Thursday, July 10.

Serving as coordinators for the convention are Cantors Joseph Portnoy of Temple Emanu-El, David Unterman of Temple Sinai,

Cantor Portnoy Cantor Feldman

Oakland, Martin Feldman of Sherith Israel and Simon Cohen of Beth Abraham, Oakland.

"There will be over 175 participants," Cantor Unterman remarked, "including members of the Guild of Temple Musicians. The group also includes some Conservative cantors."

The convention will include the premiere performance of "The Dreams of Prayer," by Gershon Kingsley, utilizing the text of the new Union of American Hebrew Congregations' prayerbook, "Gates of Prayer." The performance will feature Cantor Unterman, Sidney Walker of ACT, a seven-piece instrumental ensemble and an augmented chorus conducted by Joseph Liebling of the Oakland Symphony Chorus. It will be held on Monday, July 7 at 8:30 p.m. at Congregation Sherith Israel, 2266 California St., and the community is invited.

At the convention there will be workshops with presentations of new cantorial music by Bonia Shure, Ben Steinberg and Vivian Klaus. Keynote speaker is Dr. Gerald Bubis, director of the Hebrew Union College School of Social Work in Los Angeles whose topic will be "The Cantor's Role in the Changing Needs of the Synagogue," which serves as the theme for the convention. Rabbi Zalmon Schechter will give a workshop on "The Mystical Experience of Worship."

Cantor Norman Belink of Long Island will be installed as president of the Conference, succeeding Cantor Harold Orbach of Detroit. As well, there will be business meetings and officer elections.

Burtons To Ford: 'Aid Syrian Jews'

S.F. Congressmen John and Phillip Burton have called on President Ford to speak out on behalf of Syrian Jewry when he met with the country's foreign minister, Abdul Halim Khaddam.

The Burtons said in a telegram to the President: "We urge you to convey the deep concern and interest of the American people and the Congress over the plight of Syrian Jewry and our desire that Syrian authorities allow those individuals who wish to emigrate from Syria to have the right to do so freely."

The Burtons joined with a bipartisan group of Congressmen in the message pointing out that 4,500 Jews living in Syria "have been the victims of numerous forms of discrimination, restrictions, arbitrary arrests, torture and general harassment."

In a related telegram to Foreign Minister Khaddam, the Burtons and fellow Congressmen pointed out that the easing of emigration restrictions by Syria "would be recognized as a positive move toward peace in the Middle East and encourage better, more responsive U.S.-Syrian relations."

beneficiaries, the Chabad House organization located in Berkeley but which provides social, educational and religious programming for the entire Bay Area, was awarded $1,500 to be allocated through the Jewish Family Service Agency.

In other regional developments, the Hillel Foundation at the University of California at Berkeley was recognized for its outstanding contribution to the cultural and educational life of students and others who participate in their programs. Their allocation was raised to $13,500, up from $9,000 in 1974.

Jewish programming at the University of California, Santa Cruz Campus, was granted $5,250 for 1975. The 1974 allocation was $3,000. It was noted that 37 percent of the student body at Santa Cruz is Jewish, and that many of these students come from the Bay Area.

Federation allocations to four of its agencies are being augmented with United Way (formerly the United Bay Area Crusade) contributions.

Homewood Terrace - United Way: $63,500.

Jewish Family Service Agency - United Way: $152,000

Jewish Home for the Aged - United Way: $25,000

United Jewish Community Centers - United Way: $179,000

In addition, Federation itself receives $57,000 from the United Fund toward its administrative expenses.

Cong. Beth David Pre-School Classes Begin September

Beginning in September, Congregation Beth David, 19700 Prospect Ave., Saratoga, will offer a Jewish pre-school for children two-years-and-nine months through five years old. Jewish activities will include art projects, holiday celebrations, Shabbat, songs, stories, Hebrew words and Jewish foods in the curriculum.

In addition to Jewish observances, each day the pre-school program will provide time for socialization, sensory experiences, exploration of natural and physical surroundings, muscle development, language activities, math and reading readiness experiences, music and movement, cooking and outside play.

The program will meet three days per week in the morning. For further information and applications, call the temple office at 257-3333.

Sets Dinner

The Northern California Council of the American Red Magen David for Israel will host a dinner meeting for officers and spouses of the 12 Northern California chapters of the group. The dinner will be held at the Sheraton Airport Inn, Highway 101 at the Old Bayshore exit in Burlingame, 7 p.m. Saturday, July 12.

"The Gift of Life," a new M.D.A. film, will be shown during the meeting, and details of the new blood bank and fractionation center—which will be built on the campus of the University of Tel Aviv—will be given. Discussion will also center around new M.D.A. projects, including a blood donation program, and coordination of the 12 chapters of the group.

Reservations may be made by sending the number in your group to the Northern California Council of M.D.A., P.O. Box 6391, San Jose, or by contacting Dr. William Schwartz, 721 Columbia Drive, San Mateo.

Montefiore Outreach Program Expanded

Expansion of the weekly Outreach Program for senior citizens at the Montefiore Presidio Senior Center was announced by Erna Sparer, director. The addition will be a third pick-up day in the Mission District on Fridays.

Senior citizens with ambulatory or other limiting physical disabilities are transported to the Center by mini-bus at no cost both to and from their homes. Other pick-up days are already in effect on Tuesdays for Sunset district residents and Thursdays for Richmond district residents.

Assistance in marketing and running errands in the neighborhood is also provided.

While at the Center, participants may select from a large variety of scheduled classes and enjoy a hot, kosher luncheon.

The Montefiore Senior Center is housed at the S.F. Jewish Community Center, 3200

California St., and is co-sponsored by the S.F. Section, National Council of Jewish Women and the United Jewish Community Centers. For further information on the Outreach program, contact Diane Rhine at 346-6040, Ext. 25.

Gets Death Sentence

BUCHAREST—(JTA)—Asher Andrei, a resident of the Rumanian capital, has been sentenced to death here on a charge of accepting bribes. All his belongings have been confiscated. He has appealed against the death sentence but the date of the hearing has not yet been set. There are no further details on the nature of the charges.

Andrei, a 63-year-old chemist, is married and has a married son living in Rumania. A daughter lives with her husband and children in Israel. Andrei has not applied to emigrate from Rumania.

6TH ISRAEL SUMMER YOUTH PROGRAM

'I Want To Try Hebrew Swear Words'

By Peggy A. Isaak

(Jewish Bulletin Women's Editor)

Some 80 teenagers from congregations in the Bay Area will be participants in the sixth annual Summer in Israel youth program, coordinated by Helen Ducoff, educational coordinator of the Bureau of Jewish Education. The participants left Sunday, June 22.

Two groups of 40 each, one made up of students from Temple Emanu-El and the other from Sherith Israel, Beth Sholom, Rodef Sholom, Ner Tamid, Peninsula Temple Sholom, Peninsula Temple Beth El, Beth Israel-Judea, Beth Sholom in Modesto and Sacramento congregations, will tour Israel, spend time on a kibbutz and a field installation on the Dead Sea. The students have been attending an "ulpan" at the Bureau with courses in Hebrew, lectures and films.

Matt Koalkin, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Koalkin of San Anselmo, is a participant from Rodef Sholom. He commented, "Israel will be an enriching experience. I want to see the people, their attitudes towards work and prosperity. The highlights of the trip, for me, will probably be historical sites."

"I have a whole preconceived notion about what it's going to be like," Aaron Braun, son of Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Braun, remarked. "I want to learn something that can't be learned in textbooks. I think it's going to be a place like no other ... a combination of history and a people who are writing their own history." Braun is a representative from Temple Emanu-El.

Ms. Seligman

Sue Seligman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Howard Seligman of Foster City, said, "I expect to see all the places I've heard and read about. I want to see things like Masada, where Moses was and other biblical places. I want to see how the Israelis live and how they feel about us, to see how much closer people are there, to meet them and see their way of life." Ms. Seligman is a participant from Beth El.

Linda Scott, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Don Scott of San Mateo, thinks that "it will be a lot different. The country will be much simpler and friendly, not as built-up as here, and that will be a nice change." Ms. Stone, too, is a participant from Beth El.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Weinberg of Modesto, Scott Weinberg, is a participant from Beth Sholom there. "I'd like to see ancient history, though I'm not happy about working on a kibbutz," he said. "I'd like to see first hand what's happening there, to witness soldiers in the streets with guns. I want to see the beautiful women I've heard about."

All agreed when interviewed that Israelis of high school age were more independent in their lifestyles. "They are more serious and at the same time, they worry about their country more," Ms. Stone said.

All looked forward to visiting Jerusalem. Their feelings were summed up by Koalkin: "Jerusalem will be a high point for me, for it's been in history from the time it was recorded until now."

Weinberg

Ms. Stone

There's a constant cultural exchange there because people from all different cultures have come together."

They all shook their heads when Braun commented, "I want to see if the Israelis think we're as stuck-up as I've been told."

To Weinberg, one of the most important things is to "see how Jewish I feel when I get there. I'm anxious to try out my Hebrew swear words."

... About Folks ...

Dr. and Mrs. Tevis I. Seligman were honored recently on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary at a party at the Hilton Hotel. The dinner was given by their children Mr. and Mrs. Howard Seligman and Mr. and Mrs. Michael Glick. Dr. Seligman has been a practicing dentist here for the past 51 years.

Rose and Julian Keller of Terra Linda will be honored with a reception for their 50th anniversary on Saturday, June 28. Both are active in volunteer work. The couple has two sons and five teenage grandchildren.

Frances and Louis Goldman recently celebrated their 50th anniversary with a trip to New Jersey where they visited their children, Diane and Emanuel Goldman, and Frances Weinstein, Mrs. Goldman's cousin, who signed the necessary papers and provided funds for Mrs. Goldman to come to America over 50 years ago. The Goldmans are the parents of Adele and Samuel Goldman of S.F., Rita and Martin Goldman of Oakland and Marlene and Max Scherer of Novato and have 13 grandchildren. Residents of the Mission District for more than 50 years, they are active members of Congregation B'nai David.

Harriett Z. Macht, owner of the Accentricities Antique Shop, has been elected president of Temple Beth Ami of Santa Rosa. A licensed teacher, Mrs. Macht formally taught at the Greater Miami Hebrew Academy.

Golden Gate Lodge No. 2464 B'nai B'rith sent a six-man delegation to the annual District No. Four B'nai B'rith convention in Las Vegas. Headed by lodge president Isaac "Ike" Parecki, the delegation members include Howard Shmuckler and Klaus Lissner, lodge vice-presidents; Gerald Raphael, immediate past president; Walter L. Gluckmann trustee; and Ernest L. Rosenthal, past president, who will be elected for his second consecutive term as District Four vice-president.

Edna Wolf, volunteer chairman of the Brotherhood Way Montefiore Senior program, recently resigned as chairman because of her election to the vice-presidency of the San Francisco Section, Department of Community Services. Newly-appointed chairman is Betty Anne Lipow. The Montefiore Senior program is jointly sponsored by the S.F. Section, National Council of Jewish Women and the United Jewish Community Centers.

U.S. Reassessment Waits New Meetings With Arabs

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—With Premier Yitzhak Rabin having reached an "understanding" with President Ford and Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger during his five days of discussions here and in New York, the United States turned its attention to further contacts with Egypt and other Arab countries. The American course toward diplomatic progress in the Middle East, either by a new interim agreement between Israel and Egypt or an overall settlement, remained uncertain, however. The Administration is yet to come up with its foreign aid package for Israel, Egypt, Jordan and Syria which, most observers agree, will be a tangible indication of the extent of the American commitment to those four countries in economic and military terms during the new fiscal year that begins July 1.

An aide to Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey (D-Minn.) chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee's subcommittee on the foreign aid program, told the Jewish Telegraphic Agency that hearings on the program probably will not begin until some time in July. Secretary Kissinger said, in response to a JTA question, that a precise date has not been set for the presentation of this program to Congress.

On May 15, Sen. Humphrey had said that unless the State Department was forthcoming soon with its foreign aid proposals, his subcommittee would begin hearings without the government's presentation directly after the Rabin visit. If the hearings are not held until some time in July, as now indicated, it would be the first time in foreign aid history that the United States has entered a new fiscal year without a complete aid program.

Wants To Ban Jews

VIENNA — (JTA) — The spokesman of an outlawed right-wing student organization said here that Austria should get rid of all Jews living in the country. Hermann Plessl, chairman of the banned fascist League of National Democrat Students (BNS) said that "Austria is a German country. Jews are not wanted here," he said in an interview published in the tabloid "Kronenzeitung."

M.D.s Appeal For Shtern

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J.—(JTA)—The American Physicians Fellowship urged freedom for Dr. Mikhail Shtern, the imprisoned Soviet-Jewish physician, and denounced the World Health Organization's recent condemnation of Israel in resolutions adopted at the closing session of its four-day meeting here. The APF, an organization of 8700 dues-paying Jewish physicians of the United States and Canada, held its meeting as part of the American Medical Assn.'s annual convention.

Its resolution on Dr. Shtern charged that the trial and imprisonment of the 55-year-old endocrinologist from Vinnitsa, Ukraine was "an act of persecution and vindictiveness following Dr. Shtern's approval of the Israeli immigration of his two sons." The resolution appealed "to the members of the Medical Workers Union in Russia and the Council of the USSR Scientific Medical Society... to mobilize and exert their influence so that the Soviet authorities will understand that fundamental justice and concern for human rights demand the freedom of Dr. Shtern."

The resolution on the WHO accused that United Nations agency of "political perversion" in its recent resolution condemning Israel for its medical treatment of the Arab inhabitants of the administered territories "despite the fact that the WHO investigator unconditionally approved Israel's health services in those areas."

The Jewish Bulletin is mailed into 18,000 Bay Area homes and offices every Friday. For information on advertising rates call 495-5950.

Abzug Denies Aid Opposition

NEW YORK—(JTA)—Rep. Bella Abzug (D-N.Y.) resigned from the Women's International League for Peace and Freedom in protest against the misuse of her name in a letter sent to members of Congress by the New York branch opposing aid to Israel.

Ms. Abzug, who supports the Israeli aid request, also dispatched letters to Sen. Jacob Javits (R-N.Y.) and other members of the Senate disassociating herself from the letter. The national leaders of the WILPF also assured Ms. Abzug that they would write to members of the Senate disassociating the national organization from the New York letter which they said was sent without their knowledge.

Errors Cited On 60 Minutes

NEW YORK—(JTA)—Rabbi Joseph Harari, executive director of the Committee for the Rescue of Syrian Jewry, charged today that the re-broadcast of Mike Wallace's "60 Minutes" contained erroneous statements.

On the original broadcast, Wallace said that four young Jews were executed for espionage. On the re-broadcast, in an answer to complaints, Wallace justified this by asserting that a Syrian Jew had told him the story. Rabbi Harari said. He complained that this "is totally fictitious," and added "No Syrian Jew has ever been convicted or executed for espionage." He accused Wallace of "lending credibility to the Syrian government's claim that the Jews present the threat of a possible fifth column."

He further rebuked Wallace "because he caused a man to falsely stand witness against his own people. No Jew would justify such a lie unless he was forced to." Rabbi Harari concluded by asking Wallace why he did not mention a truthful and more recent incident in which he said, "Last year the secret police delivered to the Damascus Jewish community the bodies of four young women and two men who were murdered as they attempted to flee the country."

Belfast...

a scheduled meeting by an Israeli speaker recently.

According to my sources, Smith was in line to become the second Jewish Lord Mayor before he was squeezed out by the ascendant extremists. He was a Unionist Councillor for six years. Any journalist would be tempted to label him "the man in the middle," but the general esteem for him has made him acceptable as chairman of the highly sensitive Greater Belfast Education Committee.

In other fields, a prominent Jewish businessman, Alan Brown is chairman of the Belfast Chamber of Commerce and Trade. It is also interesting to hear how Catholics and Protestants meet amicably in the homes of their Jewish friends.

One perhaps symbolic figure is L. Selim who runs a prosperous photographic business. He specializes in weddings and thus as a Jew is acceptable to both denominations. Smith, like other Belfast Jews rejects notions of Belfast Jewry as a community in crossfire. If Jewish shops get blown up, it is not because of their owners' identity but because the stores are in the line of fire.

Smith reports "all sorts of well-meaning people, Jews and non-Jews, have asked us to be mediators. But we decided that we will not get involved on either side." The ever present sectarian strife is largely a working class phenomenon. This means that the middle class Jews can manage to cleave to their policy of uninvolvedness. But the question is for how long? The joke about the Belfast Jew being asked by the menacing gunman whether he was a Protestant Jew or a Catholic Jew is not very funny if you live in Belfast. It is hoped that they will not be obliged to choose.

Terrorist Rockets Hit Galilee Town

TEL AVIV—(JTA)—Terrorist rocket fire caused some damage but no casualties in Israeli villages near the Lebanese border. Israeli artillery returned the fire. A military spokesman reported damage to power lines and some buildings in Metullah, Israel's northernmost settlement which was the target of Katyusha rockets at about midnight. An Israeli border patrol was attacked near Kfar Yuval after midnight and Katyusha rockets were fired at Kfar Giladi and Metullah just before dawn causing slight damage which was promptly repaired.

The terrorist attack on Kfar Yuval claimed its third Israeli victim when Simha Mordechai, 22, died in Safad hospital of wounds inflicted by the same hand grenade that killed her husband Yaacov. Her seven-month-old son, Assaf was still on the serious list after undergoing surgery to remove grenade splinters from his head and legs.

Her brother, Nehemia Yossef-Chai, a newly enlisted soldier home on his first leave, was also killed by the four terrorists who invaded the Mordechai home. All three members of the family will be buried with full military honors at the tiny cemetery in Kfar Yuval.

Soviet Jew Fights For His Father's Life . . .

with a flowing black beard. "His beard became completely grey. Now I understand they have cut it off .. probably to hide the fact."

Had the family discussed the possible consequences of August's decision to emigrate? "Yes, we discussed it. It was a difficult decision. My family said that I am not a child and it was my decision. The authorities asked my father to refuse me permission. He would not. We knew there would be problems but not such an inhuman and terrible thing to sentence a man ... all the talent and work he gave his country ... no one thought ..."

Did he regret his decision now? His hands folded in front of him, he stared at the floor, his voice barely audible. "You know if my father dies in prison ..." his voice trails off. There is a sympathetic silence and the subject changes to his recent meeting with Philip Buchanan, President Ford's Counselor: "He was very understanding and sympathetic. He assured me he would speak to President Ford. I have met with leaders in France, London — many officials (including Britain's Harold Wilson) have spoken to Soviet officials."

August Shtern is defensive when asked about his reasons for applying for a visa. He says simply "I wanted to go." Asked for more specific reasons, he looks uneasy, though smiling: "It's not a crime, is it?" He is still cautious — his father and mother are still in the Soviet Union. He will have a job in Israel, he says. Some of his friends are organizing a psychology research institute.

There is ongoing contact with Mikhail Shtern, although visiting rights in the Soviet Union are once a year. "People come and go to prison" August explains. "I am sure for instance, that he has seen this ad" (The N.Y. Times ad) signed by American physicians, appealing for clemency for Dr. Shtern.

August plans to return to Israel at the end of the month. He hopes by then, that "all this will be a terrible history" and his father will be free.

Rumanian Jew's Death Sentence Cut To 20 Years

NEW YORK—(JTA)—The death sentence handed down against Andrei Asher, a 63-year-old Rumanian Jew, has been commuted to 20 years' imprisonment, it was confirmed by several sources here. Asher, a resident of Bucharest and a chemist by profession, was sentenced to death on April 30 after conviction for alleged economic crimes involving acceptance of a bribe.

Jacob Birnbaum, national director of the Center for Russian Jewry with the Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry, reported the commutation. It was confirmed by Dr. Charles H. Kramer, president of the Roumanian Jewish Federation of America.

SFJC Elects Officers, Board

Congressmen Seek Halt To $58 Million For Syria

WASHINGTON—(JTA)—Three New York Congressmen introduced legislation barring $58 million in economic assistance to Syria. In addition, one of them telegraphed President Ford to urge him to bring up the subject of Syrian Jewry when he meets the Syrian Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam at the White House. A telegram also went to the Syrian Embassy addressed to Khaddam on the subject.

The State Department would not say whether Secretary of State Kissinger would raise the matter of Syrian Jewry with Khaddam in their talks here. Replying a question by the Jewish Telegraphic Agency, a Department spokesman said bilateral matters would be taken up.

Reps. Stephen J. Solarz, Jonathan B. Bingham and Benjamin S. Rosenthal, all New York City Democrats, urged Congress to block the economic aid for Syria by invoking the Foreign Assistance Act of 1974 that stipulates that the President may not expend funds from the $100 million Special Requirements Fund for the Middle East if Congress adopts a concurrent resolution disapproving such action within 30 days after notice from the President of his intention.

They cited language in the law which expresses the sense of the Congress that funds should not be provided "to any nation which denies its citizens the right or opportunity to emigrate." The Congressmen pointed out that Syrian Jews are forbidden to leave Syria, even to join relatives far from that country, in direct contravention of the Universal Declaration of Human Rights to which Syria is a signator.

Tov." At the front entrance where the average ballet-addicts, amateur critics, friends and middle-class patrons entered, the leafletting was fierce and several volunteers held a sign calling for artistic freedom for Soviet Jews. Police stood by unconcerned. The low-key protest was as quiet and orderly as it was well-planned. Ron Butler of the JCRC, mastermind of the effective demonstration, articulated their cause to the press.

An occasional Soviet giant, affectionately known as the KGB, hulked by the group in some heavy-handed surveillance. They would have been inconspicuous if they hadn't been a foot and a half larger than anyone else. One even grabbed a brochure with a fist the size of a baseball glove, and crept away with it to some candle-lit room no doubt.

But the message got across . . . hopefully to the literate and compassionate and all the uninformed. A few stalwarts waited to brochure Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin who, it was rumored, would be attending. It was a chill night, the wind blew, the usher informed them with a yawn that the ceremonies inside had started with a speech by the Mayor . . . and they left. The only survivor was a thin young man with a small bouquet, waiting at the stage door, he said, for one of the ballerinas. Like August Shtern, who was there earlier, he waited for a door to open (See separate story). Each of us has our own private heartfelt hopes and wishes.

He would probably be there every night of the ballet. But so would the 15 or 20 Soviet Jewry volunteers, until every ballet-goer at least had the opportunity to find out who suffers beyond the cultural walls of the Opera House.
